

The Institute of English and American Studies kindly invites you to the lecture given within the framework of the Science Month by

Prof. Jocelyn Wogan-Browne

Women and Multilingualism in Late Medieval England – And Why it Matters Now

Time: 21 November 2018, 12.00 p.m.

Venue: Studio 111 (Main building)

Prof. Jocelyn Wogan-Browne holds the Thomas F. X. and Theresa Mullarkey Chair in Literature at Fordham University, New York (USA), and is currently a Senior Core Fellow at the Institute of Advanced Study, CEU. Her main teaching and research areas are medieval insular literary culture between 1100-1500, especially medieval English and French vernaculars, and medieval women's writing.

All welcome!

